

Beginning Light Language (2014)

Study summary

Master the geometry of your reality

Every thought you hold carries a message that shapes how you meet the world. When intention is clear, it organises attention and choice: you move from only reacting to circumstances toward consciously designing them. Many introductions frame this through resonance and layered subtle “bodies”—philosophical imagery, not medical advice.

Core principles of transformation

- Your thoughts participate in shaping experience.
- You are responsible for your choices.
- As above, so below: shifting subtler layers first is often described as gentler than forcing change only at the densest level.

Sacred geometry — quick reference

Many paths use geometry and colour as levers for clarity—bringing light into the pattern and loosening what no longer fits.

Cube — stabilisation: holds focus; steadies a quality in place.

Sphere — opening: widens options; invites movement.

Pyramid — integration: sharpens a goal; keeps a fact coherent.

Cylinder — connection: bridges two points; strengthens flow between them.

Colour as frequency

- Red — vitality, physical movement.
- Yellow — clarity, focus, active intelligence.
- Green — balance, renewal, growth tone.
- Blue — rest, spaciousness, easing congested flow imagery.
- Purple — wisdom tone; reflective intuition.

Elevate your frequency

Much of this work is “caught” in the field of someone who already lives the tones—not only read in a book. Choosing to live by the pattern, rather than against it, supports creating what you truly need. For depth, study with ethical teachers and printed sources you trust.

JustBe.Works

Independent summary for orientation; not a copy of the Beginning Light Language Student Manual (2014, © Starr Fuentes). Between classes, Light Language Grid Creator is a visual grid studio (shapes, colours, export)—not affiliated with the manual's publisher.